

The Collegian

Volume 110 2012-2013

Article 21

4-1-2013

Volume 110, Number 21 - Monday, April 1, 2013

Saint Mary's College of California

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.stmarys-ca.edu/collegian>

Part of the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Saint Mary's College of California (2013) "Volume 110, Number 21 - Monday, April 1, 2013," The Collegian: Vol. 110 , Article 21.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.stmarys-ca.edu/collegian/vol110/iss1/21>

This Issue is brought to you for free and open access by Saint Mary's Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Collegian by an authorized editor of Saint Mary's Digital Commons. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@stmarys-ca.edu.

The GAELY Mail

GAELAGA, CALIFORNIA • VOLUME 110, NUMBER 21 • MONDAY, APRIL 1, 2013 • WEACTUALLYHAVEAWEBSTEENOW.COM • MYSPACE.COM/THEGAELYMAIL • AOL KEYWORD: GAELYMAIL

NEWS FROM THE FRONT: SMC only 149 years old!

College administrators vow to celebrate bigger and better next year

BY DANE JOURAS
RIDICULOUSLY GOOD LOOKING PERSON

In a shocking turn of events, a document unearthed in the archives revealed that Saint Mary's is actually 149 years old. The administration held an emergency press conference Friday afternoon, expressing their regret for the oversight: "We were really convinced that this was our 150th anniversary and are disappointed that our hard work in gaelebrating this gaelorious occasion was wasted."

The Saint Mary's community was understandably upset by the news. One student, who tearfully recalled all the events he attended this year, lamented that, "My life is a lie. I thought this was the Year of the Gael." Others expressed similar views in reflection of the false sesquicentennial.

Attempting to repair the damage made by this gaelnормous error, the administration ended the conference on a positive note: "Since we made this horrible miscalculation, we would like to take this time to announce that, beginning in the Fall 2013 semester, we will be launching Gaelebration 2.0 to re-celebrate the actual Year of the Gael."

Get ready to gaelebrate like never before, Saint Mary's, because the school has vowed to completely eclipse the celebration of the school's 149th anniversary. In honor of the real 150th anniversary, this coming year's festivities will be the greatest thing since sliced bread. Prepare to gaely go where no Gael has gone before because The Gaely Mail was allowed a behind-the-scenes look into the college's plans to make this 150th better than the first.

Gaelebration 2013 will be harder, better, faster, and stronger because Kanye West is heading up the main concert stage at the festival. Rumor has it that he is even writing a special song for the occasion: "Gael Digger." But the party doesn't stop there. Head over to the De La Salle lawn, which will be taken up by an extensive petting zoo featuring giraffes, slow lorises, alpacas, elephants, cats, and Ryan Gosling. Children can join Story Time with Beyonce and Blue Ivy, or ride on the carousel, ferris wheel, and Space Mountain ride that Disneyland will be loaning to Saint Mary's for the day.

If you don't feel like pop-lock-and-droppin' it to Kanye's beats, rejoice in the fact that Saint Mary's will be allowing all students to drink that day so that everyone can enjoy the real 150th anniversary brew. In addition, Saint Mary's will be hiring more than three food trucks, including waffles, make-your-own tropical drinks, actual foot-long hotdogs, and a truck exclusively devoted to macaroni and cheese. Other prominent speakers will be in attendance during the day, so stop by some exclusive talks such as, "How to really steal the Declaration of Independence with Nicolas Cage," or "How to help kids read good and do other stuff too with Derek Zoolander."

The excitement will not only be limited to Gaelebration 2.0—Saint Mary's will be producing the "Actual Great Conversations" events for next year. Of course, the college will have to surpass the success of the events held this year. Expect President Obama to be here one night for hors d'oeuvres and witty banter with the Saint Mary's community, and keep an eye out for J.K. Rowling's reading night where she will read from her new top secret Harry Potter book.

Even though Saint Mary's put in a lot of money and time into celebrating the school's 149th anniversary, the community can rest assured that the gaelebrating will not stop at the end of this semester.

Saint Mary's offers an innovative new housing option

BY JAMES KIRK
CAPTAIN OF THE USS ENTERPRISE

After last week's stressful and tumultuous battle for housing, Saint Mary's has decided to take the concerns of students into account and announced their decision to cease building the new sports complex.

Instead, the space will be kept undeveloped and will be used as an open field for students to live.

Yes, Saint Mary's students, find your tent and sleeping bag because it's time to go native.

Are you an expert at building fires? Laying out tarps and collecting rain water? If you have found yourself with nowhere to live next year, or if you simply dislike confining yourself within walls and wearing clothing, then the new camping site may be perfect for you. Student will be put into pairs or small groups and will receive the "Gaelderness Package" (Gael and Wilderness, for those unfamiliar with the Saint Mary's lingo). This package includes a tarp, tent, rain cover, camping lantern, fire starting kit, and a crossbow for warding off the wildlife.

Don't want to pay for a meal plan? In addition to the new residence community, Saint Mary's will be introducing a new meal plan to coincide with the rustic environment.

The new "Wilderness Cuisine" plan supplies students with hunting supplies (camouflage, cages, bows and arrows) to catch their own furry critters for food. In addition, the plan would allow students a certain amount of cooking supplies per month, including sticks to grill Admiral Fluffington the squirrel over the fire, or crates of fruits and vegetables to prevent scurvy.

For some students, this is the greatest thing since sliced bread. "I'm super stoked," expressed one student, who desired to remain unnamed, but self-titled himself as a raccoon hunting prodigy. "This is a gaelorious opportunity for students to reconnect with nature." This could be a great springboard for new Saint Mary's organizations to rise. Got a passion for fashion? Start a new club that teaches students how to create hip outfits from furs and skins. Do you enjoy weaving baskets out of grass and twigs? Yes, this is the residence community for you.

"I mean, it's not really an ideal living situation," one student expressed sadly after learning she did not get on-campus housing. "But my roommate and I really have no other choice. At least we will be living with the hundreds of other kids who did not get on-campus housing." Hopefully, students who are not feeling as positive about their new residence assignment will feel better once they begin their living experience next year. Honestly, once residents learn how to collect water from the nearby puddles and streams to do their laundry—and figure out how to break into the nearby townhouses to shower see HOUSING, page 149

INSIDE THIS WEEK'S EDITION

NEWS PAGE 149

Somebody gives a speech on campus

OPINION PAGE 420

We're angry about something politicians said

DETOUR PAGE 69

Music and movies and fashion, oh my

SPORTS PAGE 1492

Most likely something about basketball

Reformed Seminar program dumps books for looks

BY HAIRY POTTER
CONTRIBUTING MANAGING EDITOR

Is reading hard for you? Do you miss the innocent childhood days of pop-up and picture books? Well, you are not alone. In an attempt to make Seminar exciting for everyone, Saint Mary's announced at a conference on April 1 that all books in the Seminar program will be made into picture books. If you thought Plato was confusing now, then having his convoluted words in pictures will make it so much easier to understand.

"Seminar is an integral part to our Core Curriculum here at Saint Mary's, and we want to make it enjoyable for everyone here," expressed a member of Saint Mary's academic community. This new change seems daunting, but it doesn't depart too far from what students are used to in Seminar. "This is really just a continuation of that one day in Seminar where we interpret pictures. Students really seem to enjoy that day, so now we are making that happen in every class meeting."

Responses to this decision have been mixed in the student community. "Well, I like pictures," expressed one student who really didn't seem to care one way or the other. "So maybe this will be cool or something."

see SEMINAR, page 149

TEH INSIDE PAGE

The GAELY Mail

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE OF CALIFORNIA

1997 Winner
Best in Show
American Kennel Club

P.O. Box 4407
Gaelaga, CA 94575
223 Ferroggiaro Hall (for now)

Telephone: Don't bother.

Email: smccollegian@gmail.com
Website: stmaryscollegian.com

SCARED BUNNY
TONY "BIPPITY BOPPITY" GOTTI
Enablers

MIA
Money Master

CHARLEMAGNE OF DENVER
Chief Infographic Maker

TACOCAT
Captain of Judginess

TACOCAT JR.
Lieutenant Judy

CAPTAIN PLANET
Queen of Cats

SASSY MCSASSPANTS
Gastropub Reviewer

TINY DANCER
Dance Dance Revolutionary

GEORGE OF THE JUNGLE
Sports Master

SIMON SAYS
Sports Padawan

STALKER GUY
Takes Pictures of You

The Gaely Mail is the only official newspaper of the Associated Students of Saint Mary's College. If you see a different newspaper, that's not us. The Gaely Mail is published only on the night of the harvest moon, except during examination periods and academic recesses—because we want a break too. When we aren't causing issues or stalking cats down for interview quotes, we enjoy riding horses into the sunset, wearing hats, and the occasional caramel latte from Starbucks.

If you want to be cool like us and chill with us then you can find us in hip places. We appreciate sacrificial offerings of fresh flowers and animals, and we also enjoy ballads written of our brave adventures in the green rolling hills of mild Moraga. Did you know that taco cat is a palindrome? Do you even know what that word is? Kanye West does, ask him. Actually don't, I lied. He knows nothing.

"PO-TA-TOES. Boil 'em, mash 'em, stick 'em in a stew. But don't drop them on the carpet. Because that, my friends, That is how you get ants."

—SYLVIA KANYE PLATH

The brand new Gong Lounge clanks up campus

BY CORY MATTHEWS
BOY MEETING THE WORLD

As part of the Lasallian tradition, Saint Mary's has a history of letting students speak their minds. Students have a variety of outlets to express themselves, whether it be through the Intercultural Center, the Women's Resource Center, or several other campus organizations.

Now, Saint Mary's students have a new means of expressing themselves as a committee of students formed to create The Gong Lounge, a new event on the first Tuesday of every month from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m.

All Saint Mary's students are invited to share in front of an open mic their best slam poetry, interpretive dances, and improv comedy, among other talents, as a way of expressing themselves to the warm crowd in Hagerty Lounge.

But whenever audience members deem an act to be lacking in talent, coherence, or taste, among many other essential qualities that are necessary to perform in front of any audience, they are able to strike the 10-foot-wide gong at the back of Hagerty Lounge. At that moment, the performer is forced to stop his or her act, get off the stage, and exit Hagerty Lounge immediately.

In an interview with The Gaely Mail, Connor Foxworthy, the chief coordinator of The Gong Lounge, explained this process as ensuring quality control and that it enhances the experience for everyone attending the event.

"We were inspired by the pioneering spirit of Chuck Barris. We really wanted to bring The $1.98 Beauty Show to campus, but the Women's Resource Center brought up the point that such an event would be sexist. So instead, we want The Gong Lounge to create a safe space so that anyone can express themselves, whether it be song and dance, pantomime, or puppet shows. But we also want to make sure that the audience is having fun too, which is what a lot of people forget about when they're on stage," Foxworthy said. "We really want our performers to do their best—we really do—but we also want them to know when they're really, really bad so that they know how to get better."

The Gong Show was a parody game show that aired on daytime NBC in the late 1970s. The Chuck Barris-produced game show presented itself as a talent show with celebrity judges who could similarly end acts with the smash of a giant orange gong.

At the first The Gong Lounge event on Tuesday, audiences took to the gong with glee and excitement. In the first act, Kenneth Edmonton rapped about the perils of being white while using a plastic Home Depot bucket as a drum. Edmonton lasted 17 seconds before an audience member clanked the gong. In the second act, a comedian presented a standup routine. His identity is now known, for he was so afraid to reveal himself that he wore a paper bag over his head. The unknown comic's routine lasted a surprising two minutes.

After seventeen performers, all of whose acts were heavily abbreviated due to the audience's gong rattles, The Gong Lounge ended after a mere 42 minutes despite having leased eight hours of Hagerty Lounge. Coordinators clearly did not realize how short the event would be once they gave the audience the option to end low-quality performances. Despite this and APASA's criticisms of them reappropriating the Chinese gong, Foxworthy seemed pleased after the first The Gong Lounge and confident that audience members will want to return.

"We know this is amateur hour—or hours—so we see this as making sure that audiences are going to actually want to come back," Foxworthy said.

SMC approves recreational marijuana as Gaelblazing

BY CARLITO BARBACOA
ASSISTANT CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Moraga's verdant trees are not the only green things in the Saint Mary's hillside. Saint Mary's President Mohammed Gaelsberg-Anderson reaffirmed Saint Mary's dedication to social justice activism in advocating for recreational marijuana legalization, or "gaelblazing," as it is referred.

"Saint Mary's College has always been at the forefront in paving the way for positive social change. It's clear that frequent gaelblazing is consistent with our Lasallian values," said Gaelsberg-Anderson in a statement.

While Gaelwatch (formerly Public Safety) issued violations for Gaels who gaelblazed, Gaelsberg-Anderson ordered Gaelwatch to reverse the School Handbook's policy. This prohibition on gaelblazing forced Gaels to take extreme measures to smoke in their dorm rooms or blaze in the Moraga hills.

Now, Gaels will be able to openly smoke marijuana anywhere on campus, including indoors. Gael-dexho has accommodated this change in keeping Saga open 24 hours a day should any Gaels feel the munchies.

"I'm stoked," said sophomore Samantha Swagner. "Before this, I had to put a towel underneath my door and blow the smoke outside my window like everyone else. Now, I'll be able to light up right in Seminar instead of toking beforehand like always."

Former Gaely Mail News Editor Deninne Abuwhale is excited about the change. "Saint Mary's used to have a hard stance against me gaelblazing in my room. It was one of the main reasons why I transferred to USE," said Abuwhale.

The Wealth and Hellness Center's recent proposals to make the campus smoke-free may not have passed the Academic Congress, but director Emlyra Ramirez affirmed the Wealth and Hellness

Not a doctored photo. Photographer chose to remain anonymous.

Center's support for marijuana consumption.

"Consistent studies have shown that toking up is a responsible choice compared to smoking tobacco. As long as gaelblazing is done as a consensual act, there's nothing wrong with it at all," Ramirez said.

With this announcement, Saint Mary's has once again proven that it is at the forefront for social change. While some great states such as Colorado have legalized marijuana, Saint Mary's is now advocating for across-the-board marijuana legalization in the city of Moraga.

"I'm excited about this," Gaelsberg-Anderson said. "I'm excited that Saint Mary's students have more means to recreation beyond our newly-completed multi-million dollar recreation facility, and I'm excited that Gaels are strongly in support of such a positive social change."

Hoodrat Stuff

4/1/12 4:20 a.m.
Incident: Typical Gaely Mail Shenanigans
Synopsis: Gaely Mail editorial staff found harboring 23 cats in the staff office; referred to Mission and Ministry Center.

4/1/12 10:45 a.m.
Incident: Juvenile anarchy
Synopsis: Child seen doing "hoodrat stuff" with his "hoodrat" friends; referred to his mother, reality.

4/1/12 3:00 p.m.
Incident: Infestation
Synopsis: Food dropped onto floor of Dante Hall classroom. This is how you get ants, people; referred to ISIS.

4/1/12 12:19 p.m.
Incident: Grammatical Assault
Synopsis: Student slapped for not using Oxford comma; referred to Opinion Editor of The Gaely Mail.

4/1/12 9:23 a.m.

Incident: Animal conspiracy
Synopsis: Raccoons, squirrels, and turkeys seen gathered in Redwood Grove, appeared to be planning an uprising; referred to the meat eaters of Saint Mary's.

4/1/12 11:48 a.m.
Incident: Hipster sighting
Synopsis: Young man in Toms, a plaid shirt, and scarf wandering around Legacy Garden, complaining about how mainstream corn has gotten; referred to Urban Outfitters.

4/1/12 3:12 a.m.
Incident: Weird stuff
Synopsis: Student found on the roof of De La Salle, claiming he had been abducted by aliens who gifted him with the ability to communicate with small mammals; referred to psychiatric health.

4/1/12 10:01 p.m.
Incident: Festivity Continuity
Synopsis: Public safety allows townhouse party to exceed 10 p.m. and joins in; referred to disbelief. I mean, you seriously don't believe that, right?

4/1/12 8:15 p.m.
Incident: Noise violation
Synopsis: Gong rang too many times during the Lounge; referred to the Sports Band.

4/1/12 5:15 p.m.
Incident: Stealing
Synopsis: Student stole bag of blueberry bagels from Oliver Hall. This is why we can't have nice things; referred to Public Safety.

4/1/12 8:15 a.m.
Incident: Sexual acts
Synopsis: Students found not reading in the third floor of the library. Come on, guys, everyone read College Confessions; referred to Mission and Ministry Center.

4/1/12 1:34 a.m.
Incident: Student handbook violation

Synopsis: Someone did something bad; referred to "what else is new?"

4/1/12 12:12 p.m.
Incident: YOLO
Synopsis: Student caught riding a school golf cart claimed he only wanted to herd the deer so he could be their master; referred to no one, because ain't nobody got time for that.

4/1/12 5:13 a.m.
Incident: Inappropriate touching
Synopsis: Ryan Gosling filed a complaint that a student would not stop petting his hair, even though he was in the petting zoo. Ryan's not fooling anyone – we know he liked it; referred to petting zoo people.

4/1/12 7:30 a.m.
Incident: Life choices
Synopsis: Student stayed up too late and ate too much ice cream; referred to reality check and their mother.

NEWZ

Beyond the Bubble

Airport to be built in Moraga
The townsfolk argued that they actually like bright lights and loud plane engine noises, contrary to popular belief. However, in a meeting last week, they still denied Saint Mary's appeal to leave the stadium lights on past nine. In retaliation, Saint Mary's has created its own airline company – Gaelwest – and claimed the airstrip. Gaelwest will only exist to ferry students back and forth from Gonzaga to cheer on the sports teams because, let's be honest, who would ever want to go to Spokane anyway.

Rambling off topic determined to be a real disease
In a public announcement, some important spokesperson in Washing D.C. announced that rambling off topic is a real affliction that afflicts a lot of afflicted people in the US. This is shocking, almost as shocking as that one time I lost one of my socks in the drier. Every single time, I lose a sock in the drier and, frankly, it's getting pretty tiring. How can you paint with all the colors of the wind, though? Yesterday, I saw a deer – which is pretty much something I see every day. Wait, I'm sorry, I started rambling again.

Nutella supplies revealed to be dwindling

Following a devastating announcement that the world has run out of Nutella, stressed college students and post-breakup teenage girls having been rushing to the grocery stores in an attempt to secure the last remaining jars of Nutella. Entrepreneurs have risen to the opportunity and are marketing knock-offs of the heavenly, chocolate-hazelnut spread. But let's be real here, guys, Nutella is not just a food – it's a source of life. It is now a common site to see a bedraggled and distressed college student roaming the streets of the Lamorinda area, beginning for one spoonful of the delicious, inspiring, marvelous Nutella spread. Oh dear...I seem to be really craving some Nutella now.

Zombies found living in the Saint Mary's catacombs
Is anyone really surprised by this, though? Last Monday, some hoodrat kids doing hoodrat stuff in the catacombs were reportedly attacked by a zombie man and his zombie cat companion. Two students were bitten by the monsters and one escaped unscathed. The conditions of the two students have been kept quiet, so it's pretty safe to assume that they're zombies now. Run, everyone, run for your lives. Leave everything behind. Nowhere is safe.

Because there's a whole world beyond Ascot...

Mitt Romney rejected at blind tryouts in The Voice
In a shocking turn of events, smooth crooner Mitt Romney did not advance onto a team on the show The Voice, the audience of which contains a large amount of men in their 50's. Like my dad. Anyway, despite the presidential-reject's attempt to belt out Journey's "Don't Stop Believing," none of the judges wanted him on their teams.

Romney was understandably upset, tearfully asking Shakira why she didn't want him. However, he was able to regain his composure after Adam Levine offered him an awkward pat on the arm. Witnesses say that Romney has returned to his seaside La Jolla house, where he has been refining his skills and lamenting the fact that he did not go with "Moves Like Jagger" for his audition.

High speed rail abandoned for other transportation ideas
In a statement on April 1, President Obama announced that he has decided to abandon the plans for high speed rail in favor of a cooler form of transportation – teleportation. That's right, if you ever felt the desire to yell out "Beam me up, Scotty!" then this is the story for you. The President has devoted all money from defense and education into the building of these teleportation stations. Passengers would only have to step onto the teleportation pad, envision their destination, and press the button. Now you can go to Hawaii whenever you want, or pop by Grandma's for some cookies and milk. The President refused to comment on the risk of leaving body parts behind due to a faulty teleport.

New study reveals that cats are jerks on purpose
If you think your cat hates you, it's actually true.

Pope reveals new fashion line
In partnership with Gucci and Beyonce, Pope Francis presented the designs for his new fashion line: "Abercrombie & Pope." The line will feature vestments in a variety of colors and patterns. If you consider yourself a papal traditionalist, then you can chose from white or cream. For the wild ones out there, you can choose from leopard print or gold stud detail on the shoulders. The line also includes a selection of fine, Italian leather boots and fashionable scarves for the cold winter weather in the Vatican. Not included: the Pope Mobile.

Kampus Kalendar

- Free Food
Tuesday, April 9
3:45 p.m.-3:50 p.m.
Dante Hall 221
Contact...who cares? Free food!
- Gael Cinema Presents: Some Movie with Will Ferrell
Wednesday, January 19
8:08 a.m.
Contact Campus Activities Board
x0420
- Ice Skating
LOL JK it's not Christmas ???
Contact no one
- Gaelebration
Already happened

Gaeldexho provides students new feline dining options

BY KITTY POWERS
ASSOCIATE STAFF PERSON

Saint Mary's is known for many things – the basketball team, the picturesque campus, and the many feral cats running freely around the grounds. However, due to the increase in the cat population, the school recently announced that they have been forced to take action in order to lower the number of feral cats on campus. Beginning in the Fall 2013 semester, Oliver Hall will begin serving cat in order to dispose of the animals in a less expensive and non-wasteful way. Understandably, many students were horrified by the news, but the cafeteria insists that they will do their best to make it seem like you are eating normal meat. The great thing about serving feral cat is that it is a versatile ingredient that can be adapted to many meals. One student, who prefers to remain anonymous, said that he has had his fair share of "exotic" meats and is excited for the new dining option at Oliver. "A lot of people are worried that we are going to be force-fed cat burgers, which is totally untrue. Cat works with anything, really – you can barbeque it, boil it, broil it, bake it, sauté it. Cat kabobs, cat creole, cat gumbo, pineapple cat, lemon cat, coconut cat...cat soup, cat salad, cat-loaf, cat with biscuits and gravy, cat in an omelet. There are many gaelorious options in cooking cat. I'm stoked, man."

The cafeteria is planning on introducing the new meat gently to the students, first ground up with spices in tacos, or in stews with vegetables. "Honestly, it's just like eating chicken," said another student, who refused to disclose where and when she had eaten cat before. "People eat cow, turkey, and fish all the time. Just because Fluffy is popping up in your chow-mein now is no reason to freak out."

What does this mean for the future of dining at Saint Mary's? The cafeteria replied that, for now, they will stick to serving up cat. In the future – who knows? Oposum is known to be a delicious and filling meal. Or maybe Coonsie and his other raccoon friends will make an appearance in Thursday's lasagna.

Pull quotes are a fun way of filling up space. They look pretty, they're premade, and they somehow make people think the article is even more interesting than it really is.

Despite the backlash from some of the animal lovers on campus, this is a unique opportunity for Saint Mary's students to broaden their tastes and experience something new and exotic right on campus. Now, pass over the cat kabobs, please!

SEMINAR: Books are 20th century, says program head

"I think this is a unique opportunity for Saint Mary's, especially considering how we are trying to adapt our education system to an increasingly modern society," expressed a more enthusiastic and intelligent student. Real talk though, this could be an exciting chance for Saint Mary's to branch out and gain recognition in the academic community for this unique educational opportunity. What is honestly more exciting than interpreting the "Odyssey" in pictures? Do you remember that part where Odysseus sleeps with almost every woman while his wife stays home and weaves a shroud? Yeah, now you can see that healthy martial relationship in pictures.

Having books entirely in pictures will also help class discussions. No longer can kids rely on Sparknotes or not read at all. Now everyone can enjoy the awkward moments of embarrassment for a student who has been caught not doing the reading (or looking, since the books are in pictures now, no words). Having these Great Books in pictures could even inspire a whole new language at Saint Mary's. With no longer having to read words, students could develop communication based entirely on drawing pictures. How time efficient would it be to order a sandwich in Oliver Hall by drawing it on a piece of paper? Well, not very time efficient to be honest. But, with the help of the new seminar program, you could probably analyze the meaning of the lettuce that you included in your sandwich to symbolize your internal struggle over whether to change majors or not. Can reading words teach you that? No.

Some students have expressed their skepticism about converting these Great Books into picture books. "I think this is really dumb, to be honest," said one student emphatically who, like all other sources in this article, preferred to remain anonymous. "I mean, the Seminar program is based on reading these books that were written by these great, inspiring authors. I don't think Aristotle wrote his works with the intent of them becoming pop-up, picture books. And I really don't think Jane Austen wrote "Pride and Prejudice" hoping that a college would convert it into a "Pat the Bunny" book. I mean, I may enjoy patting Mr. Darcy's hair, but that doesn't mean I appreciate missing the true meaning of the text."

HOUSING: Students enjoy new living learning community and use the toilet—then living in the great outdoors will not be too hard.

The sun never sets on a full moon. The more you know, the less you don't. This has been a pull quote.

However, if students are still unsure about living in the mild Moraga wilderness like private school Sasquatches, then they can find comfort in the fact that Saint Mary's will be opening up another residence community in Spring 2014: the catacombs, where all you will need is a mattress and some holy water for the possible exorcism of lost souls.

- Big Questions: Why Is the Sky Blue?
Thursday, April 11
5:30 p.m.-8:00 a.m.
Saint Mary's Lake
Contact Coonsie the Raccoon
x5678
- 60 Minutes with Kanye West
Sunday, July 4
3:00 a.m.-4:00 a.m.
Gonzaga University
Contact Jay-Z
x2020
- Story Time: Martin Freeman Reads the Phonebook in That Nice Voice of His
Wednesday, February 14
You can listen to him forever
Gaely Mail Office
Contact English Department
x8769392028467401048264392
864928

Planning an event?
Want it in The Gaely Mail?

E-mail us with the details of your event at: smccollegian@gmail.com or fax us at: (444) 444-4444 or page us at: (555) 555-5555

